ACT II—A STREET IN ATHENS.

ACT III—THE TEMPLE OF HESTIA.

ACT IV—AN OUTER COURT OF THE TEMPLE.

SYNOPSIS.

Zeus has called an assembly of the gods in Olympus to demand their aid in the overthrow of Alcibiades, a wealthy and popular Athenian nobleman, through whose recklessness and treachery great Athens had lost her power. The gods promise their aid and descend to the earth, planning the capture and death of the traitor.

Alcibiades is captured while on his midnight revels but is rescued by the Vestal Virgins whose will no one may gainsay. The following night as Helen, the High Priestess, sleeps while guarding the sacred fire Eros pierces her heart with love for the man she first sees on awakening. The maiden wakes to see Alcibiades quenching the holy flame.

Her sister Vestals accuse her of having committed the crime and as her love for Alcibiades restrains her from telling the truth, she is condemned to die. Lamachus, the friend of Alcibiades, overhears her condemnation and, knowing her innocence, would fain rescue her but fears for the safety of Alcibiades.

The latter, having been captured outside the city walls, suddenly appears and accuses Lamachus of the crime. The love of Lamachus for his friend causes him to take the guilt on himself though his life and honor be the forfeit. Helen, calling on the gods for strength, betrays the falseness and perfidy of Alcibiades. The gods enter, confirming her words, and pronounce the doom of the traitor.

A woman who ordered a "gown" at her dressmaker's a short time ago does not do so now. The garment is not known by that name. Dressmakers who cater to fashionable folk are as careful of their phrases as a professor, and every few years the style in expressions changes. For instance, she would not think of calling her place of business a "shop" or a "store." To her it is a "salon." Nor does she sell "gowns" or "frocks." "Dresses" or "costumes" are the latest terms. "Costumes for ceremony" is the queer-sounding phrase that means a specially ornate affair. The modern dressmaker never uses the word "coat." It is called "jacket." Nor does she deal in waltzes. "Bodice" is the proper term. She refers to the "models" on sale.

On Tuesday the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Davies was christened at St. Andrew's Cathedral. The onlookers at the ceremony were entertained later at the Davies home.

Miss Margaret Copeland, who has been visiting Helen Wilder for several months, is convalescing from an operation at the Johnson Sanatorium.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit P. Wilder leave England for New York on April 23. Before starting for Honolulu Mr. Wilder goes to Washington to confer with forestry officials on matters relating to Hawaii.

The weekly hop at the Moana Hotel was largely attended and was, as usual, a social success.

Mrs. W. Porter Boyd and infant are expected to arrive from the Orient on an early steamer.

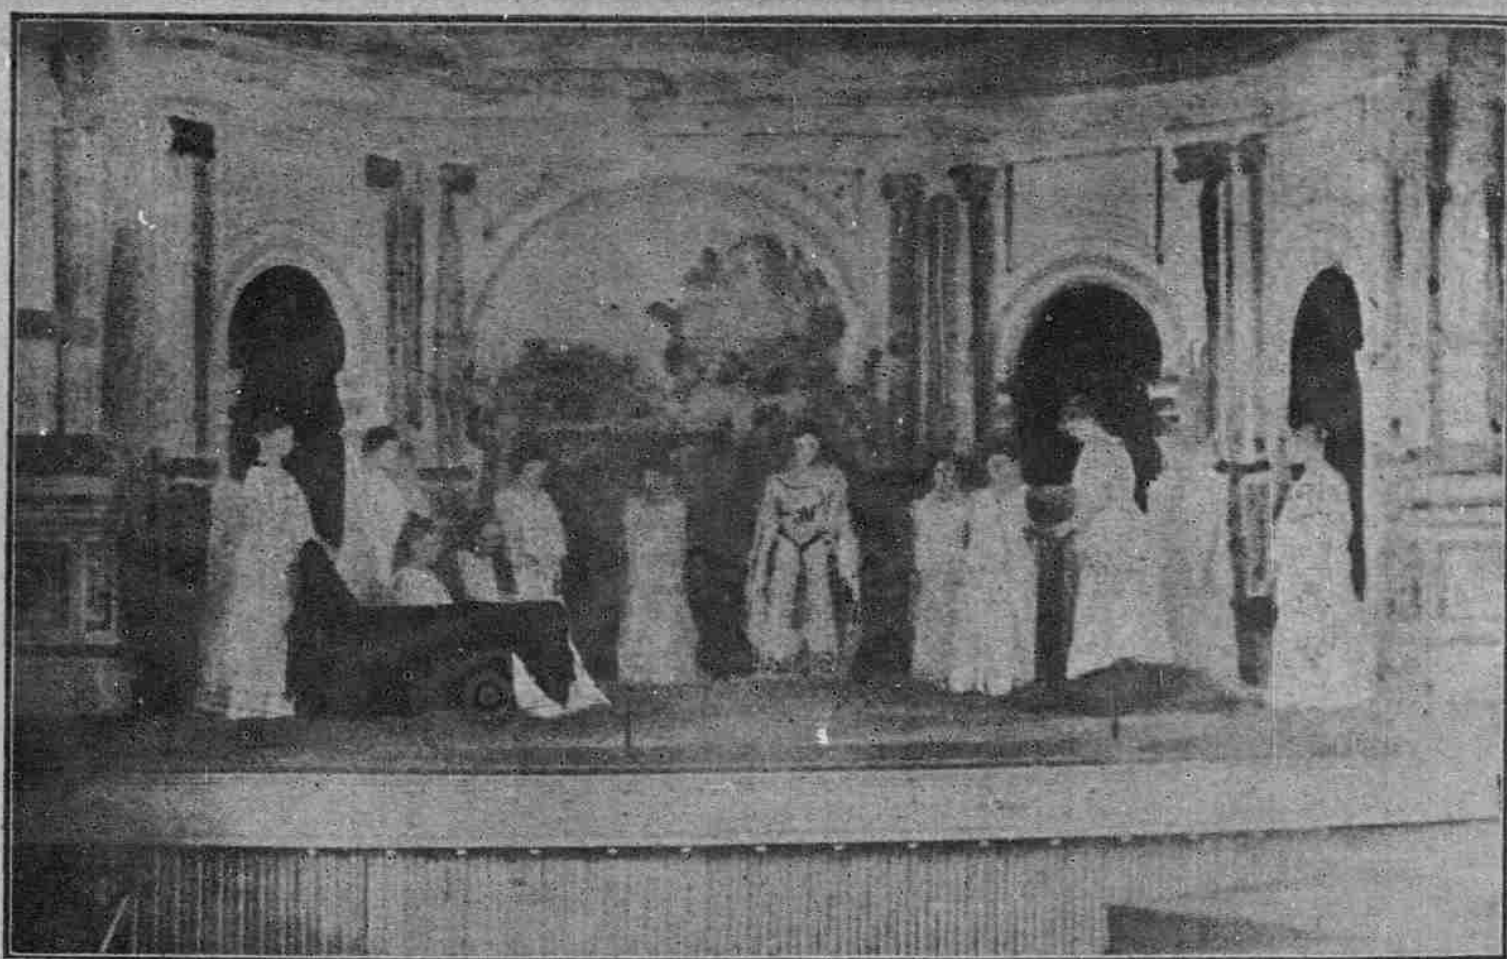

Miss Winifred Dole, cousin of Judge Dole, is a guest at the Dole's Diamond Head home.

A very elaborate dinner was given at the Moana Hotel on Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Ranold Noel Paton in honor of Mrs. Paton's birthday anniversary. The dinner was given in the two private dining rooms, one of which was carpeted and handsomely furnished as a reception hall. The table decorations were of an elaborate character, consisting of maidenhair ferns and carnations studded with dozens of miniature electric globes. From the arched above the center of the table was suspended an immense easter egg and attached to it and branching off to each guest's place were festoons of carnation leis. The unique feature of the dinner was the presentation to Mrs. Paton of birthday presents. Recognizing the fondness Mrs. Paton has for dogs, each of her guests presented her with a toy dog accompanied by appropriate good wishes. A dog was brought to her on a tray by a waiter at regular intervals during the dinner. There were pug dogs, poodle dogs, pol dogs, bull dogs, and no two were alike. To crown the whole the last dog brought was a live fox terrier presented by Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Damon. The Ellis quintette club furnished music a la Hawaiian, and dancing was indulged in under the lighted banyan tree overhanging the beach, until a late hour. The menu was one of the most delicious ever concocted by the Moana's chef. The guests were: Mr. A. S. Cleghorn, Mr. S. M. Damon, Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Focke, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Davies, Dr. and Mrs. Mays, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Kimball, Mrs. S. E. Damon, Miss Winston, Dr. and Mrs. Humphris, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Deering, Mr. David Anderson, Mr. Michael Jamieson, Mr. John Mackinnon.

Mrs. Harry Couzens was the hostess on Monday at a delightful Easter luncheon. At the center of the table was a miniature duck pond in which a large number of ducklings swam about. The place cards were prettily painted eggs, and eggs dressed to represent choir boys. Miniature boxes, containing tiny Easter hats, were at each guest's place. As a souvenir each guest was presented with a hand-painted box containing a live duckling. The guests were Mrs. Spencer, Mrs. Ballou, Mrs. Holloway, Mrs. Wight, Mrs. Alfred Carter, Mrs. Edward Jones, Mrs. Schaefer, Mrs. Charles Cooper, Mrs. J. M. Dowsett, Mrs. Bishop, Miss Jessie Kaufman, Miss Cordelia Walker and Miss Margaret Walker.

The reception on Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Edward Davies Tenney in honor of Mrs. Alexander Mackintosh and Miss Marie von Holt, was one of the largest affairs of the season, nearly three hundred guests attending. The formal reception took place on the Pensacola street lanai which was decorated with baskets of maidenhair ferns and pale yellow orchids. Mrs. Tenney, with the guests of honor, was assisted in the pleasant task of greeting the others by Mrs. Charles B. Cooper, Mrs. E. Faxon Bishop, Mrs. Percy Benson, Mrs. von Holt and Mrs. Giffard, the presentations being made by Mrs. C. Montague Cooke, Jr. At a prettily decorated table Mrs. George Herbert served tea, and coffee was poured by Mrs. Carl Holloway.

Mrs. Helen Noonan, assisted by Miss Jennie Giffard, most fetchingly gowned, served refreshing punch from a huge (Continued on page 7.)

A SCENE FROM ALCIBIADES, MISS SCHAEFER'S GREEK PLAY, WHICH IS TO BE PRESENTED AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

Charming stage pictures are shown in the Greek play "Alcibiades," which is to be presented at the Hawaiian Opera House on Tuesday evening next. Miss Ethelinda Schaefer, the young authoress, has hit upon a unique plot about which she has woven an interesting story of the ancient gods of Greece and historical characters.

What makes the play the more remarkable is the comparative youth of the author, who is yet in attendance at Punahou College. In the presentation of her initial offering for the public stage, she is supported by a large number of her young friends, the play being staged under the direction of Mrs. Walter Hoffmann.

Miss Schaefer takes the title role and presents a striking picture in her Greek costume. She seems to have special aptitude for amateur work and shows to advantage in her present undertaking of a difficult role. The first dress rehearsal was held on Friday at the Opera House. There was a pleasing passing show of gods and goddesses descended to the plains of Sparta and Athens from Olympus. Vestal virgins, arrayed in flowing white robes, warriors with spears and helmets and all the time-honored figures of the ancient Grecian time.

The first act showed the gods and goddesses grouped about the throne of Zeus on Olympus. The stage picture was attractive and much attention is being given to the delectable feature of the production. The scene in the Temple of Hestia is impressive. It is in this scene that the sacred fire of the virgins is extinguished by Alcibiades and the High Priestess is condemned to death by the Virgins for failing in her duty to keep the light alive.

The groupings have been well designed in this act and the plot shows real ingenuity. The words of the play are well connected, and the songs throughout the production are most appropriate.
